Dr. Kenneth Miller grew up in Rahway, New Jersey, attended the local public schools, and graduated from Rahway High School in 1966. Miller attended Brown University on a scholarship and graduated with honors. He was awarded a National Defense Education Act fellowship for graduate study and earned his Ph.D. in Biology at the University of Colorado. Miller is professor of Biology at Brown University in Providence, Rhode Island, where he teaches courses in general biology and cell biology. Miller's research specialty is the structure of biological membranes. He has published more than 70 research papers in journals such as “Cell”, “Nature”, and “Scientific American”. He has also written the popular trade books Finding Darwin's God and Only a Theory. His honors include the Public Service Award from the American Society for Cell Biology, the Distinguished Service Award from the National Association of Biology Teachers, the AAAS Award for Public Engagement with Science, the Stephen Jay Gould Prize from the Society for the Study of Evolution, and the Laetare Medal from Notre Dame University. Miller lives with his wife, Jody, on a small farm in Rehoboth, Massachusetts. He is the father of two daughters, one a wildlife biologist and the other a high-school history teacher. He swims competitively in the masters swimming program and umpires high school and NCAA softball.

“You do not need a lab coat, degree or laboratory to be a scientist. What you need is an inquiring mind, the patience to look at nature carefully, and the willingness to figure things out.”